

THE APPOINTING POWER.

If there ever was any saving grace in profession without practice, or rather against practice, there can be no doubt of the salvation of the locofocos. But faith without works is dead, and the more you have of it the worse you become. Let us now see how these locofocos appear in their professional practices on this subject of executive appointments. Several years since there was much pious talk about a "searching operation" that would start out either the "rotten" or the "sound" members of the Government into conflict with the freedom of election. The practice of appointing members of Congress to official stations was pointedly denounced as a direct means of making corruption the order of the day. Not many moons waned, however, before these same professors, were found "searching" for office, and editors, leaders, office seekers, and all, were urged, and importuned, and coaxed, and driven to stand by the party if they would share the spoils of victory. A wide spread and general exercise of power in appointments among political friends and ardent partisans, was put in motion, and old and young who could not establish the proof of strict conformity to party statutes were removed to make room for the "red mouthed" legions that thrust forward their claims. So general indeed has this been the case that it now almost seems to be a cardinal principle; and if so, a cardinal defect, in our republican government.

But we come to a late period and more definite point, in our own State when profession among the locofocos was at its meridian on this subject of executive patronage in appointments to office. No longer ago than the 27th of January, 1837, the locofoco paper in this city declared this point to be the "test of democracy" as will be seen by the following editorial caption, and the petition which is taken word for word from the columns of the locofoco paper in this city of that date.

"Below is the form of a petition which we are about to send into every town and plantation in the State for the purpose of obtaining signatures, and we hope that every man who is not afraid to trust the people with the selection and choice of their own officers, will sign it. There will doubtless be some, RICH men, and corrupt and inefficient office holders, who have hitherto assumed the guardianship of the people during their minority, who are not now, and probably never would be, in favor of any law or policy which would have a tendency to bring them in immediate contact with the people. Come fellow citizens, here is the test of your democracy! Are you ready for the issue?"

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives, of the State of Maine, in Legislature assembled, A.D. 1837.

We, the people of said State, would beg leave to suggest, to your honorable bodies, that we consider it not only very important, but absolutely necessary for the permanency and prosperity of a republican form of government, that the great mass of the people should be satisfied with their public officers should believe them not only qualified to perform their various duties in a proper manner, but worthy of entire trust and confidence.

We therefore, believe that your predecessors acted wisely in providing by law that all (or the most important) of the State and national officers should be chosen either by the people, or by their legally qualified representatives, and that town or city officers should be chosen by a majority of votes, in the town or city where they reside. And we also believe that it would be equally proper, and in accordance with the spirit of our form of government, for county officers to be chosen by the people of the county, as they are to fill offices which were created for the benefit and advantage of the community generally, and not simply for the benefit of a few individuals, and as we further believe that in many cases the appointment of county officers has been a matter of bargain, between a few interested individuals, and that neither the good of the people or their wishes have been at all kept in view. We would humbly petition that a law may be enacted, providing that the offices of Sheriff, Clerk of the Courts, Register of Probate, County Attorney and County Commissioner, and such other county officers as you may think proper, should be filled by men chosen by the people of the county where they reside, and where they are to perform their several duties; as we can conceive of no reason why such a law could not be as much for the interest of the community at large, as the present law respecting the appointment of said officers, and as there are many reasons why it would be much to be preferred. And as in duty bound, your petitioners would ever pray.

That is the preachment the profession. Let us now look at the practice.

At the last session of the Legislature, with a full and plump majority of locofocos, when it might be expected, if they ever intended to reduce their professions to practice, they could have introduced a bill "providing for the election of county officers by the people." Here now was the "test of democracy" offered them, but what was the result?

The leading locofocos opposed it, the House referred it to a committee opposed to the bill, who reported legislation inexpedient, and although every whig in both branches of the Legislature voted for the bill, it was lost by the votes of a majority of locos. Only ten of the party in the house voted for the bill.

No text was made to answer the able arguments of the whigs in favor of the measure, and from the very good reason that not a man in the party can answer even the arguments put forth in the foregoing petition, which they subscribed in making the people believe was to be a rule of action. A dead party vote, in direct violation of what they claim to believe right and just, defeated an important measure in the Legislature and an important principle with the people of the State.

As this is the case, it is no wonder, and underlies to play Tonia fool with the people, is unworthy of confidence, and ought to be abandoned.

MYSTERIOUS.

Mr. Ebenezer Matthews of Monson in Piscataquis county in this State, informs us that in April 1837 his son Edmund H. Matthews, who had been married but a few months, and whose domestic enjoyments appeared complete, came to this city to procure employment for a month or two, and then to return and get in the hay upon his farm. He brought with him a horse which he informed his family he had sold for ninety dollars. He obtained work at Orono and about the last of June wrote to his wife that he should be at home in a week or two. Since this time no information of him can be obtained. His trunk, clothing and pocket book were left at Orono but no money, or any of the valuable papers which he was known to possess, have yet been discovered. He was always industrious, prudent and temperate; and much attached to his friends and his family, and no cause can be assigned for his sudden disappearance.

The distress of his wife and his affectionate parents may be imagined, but cannot be described. Every day seems to them to bring with it a new death, a new trial, a new misery, more than an actual one. We think this case should excite the sympathy of the community, and if any intelligence can be conveyed to the family in reference to the existence or fate of this man, we should be happy to be the medium of communication.

We hear of repeated and alarming evils resulting from the use of Patent Pills, that should be a caution to every person who values health or life, to abstain from using any of the various sorts of pills and humbug medicines, so liberally advertised all over the country.

The use of some of them may afford temporary relief, but their general tendency is, to destroy the tone of the system, and thus injure, if not ruin the health. Secret nostrums ought never to meet with favor by an enlightened community; nor is it the part of wisdom or safety to peril health, happiness and life in the use of compounds got up for the purpose of making money. Even supposing the genuine medicine to be good in certain cases, and safe in all; the chances of getting a counterfeit and spurious article are enormous. We do our duty in giving what we deem a necessary caution.

In Prussia, a law has recently been promulgated providing that no children, under nine years of age, shall be employed in manufactories, mines, or workshops, &c., and none under 16, unless they have regularly attended school, and pursued their studies, at least three years, and are able to read with facility, and to write legibly. None under 16 are to be permitted to work more than 10 hours a day, except that in particular cases, to be determined by the local authorities, an hour a day may be added to the ten, but for a period not exceeding a month. They are also to be allowed one quarter of an hour in the forenoon, another in the afternoon, and an hour at noon, for recreation. They are not to commence before 5 in the morning, nor to work after 9 in the evening.

SCISSORS.

One half the mischief in the world is done by talking. "Excuse my back," as the horse said to the man who was riding him without a saddle. There is a man on the Green Mountains who feeds his geese with iron filings, and gathers steel pens from their wings. That's a whopper. The Militia of Pennsylvania amounts to 207,000 men, of which 5000 are cavalry, 12,000 riflemen, and the rest artillery and infantry. "Home, sweet home," as the bee said when he entered his hive. "You ought to marry." "Never." "I know a good girl for you." "But perhaps you're pshaw! you don't know her. She is young." "Then she is old." "Beautiful." "The more dangerous." "Of good family." "Then she is proud." "Tender hearted." "Then she is jealous." "She has talents." "To kill me." "And one hundred thousand dollars." "I will take her!" The debt of Russia is 596,000,000 Prussian dollars. The expenditures of last year were $122,000,000. The revenue $119,000,000. The debt of Prussia is not far from $125,000,000. That of Austria $100,000,000. France $500,000,000, and England more than ten times as great as either. A child has been sealed to death in New York by upsetting a tea pot of boiling water, part of which entered its mouth. "Pray Sophia, what are you making," said Dr. D. to a young lady at work upon a certain garment. "A supple covering Doctor." The girl was not put to a shift for a reply. A merchant of Boston went out to England in the Great Western, transacted business in several places there, and returned home after an absence of only forty days. The Journal of Commerce estimates, from the richness of the wheat crops already gathered, and the promising appearance of those yet to come, we may expect during the coming year, breadstuffs to the amount of ten millions of dollars. A correspondent of the New York Times says, that Mr. Forsyth will be the administration candidate for the Vice Presidency.

How unjust we are to women! most men who study, begin to study after the age when women are married. What do men know at twenty-five? About as much as women at eighteen. Look at the opportunities and encouragements of man. Rivalry, conversation, clubs, lectures, learned associations, always living talking and listening, and always in open air. Look at the opportunities and encouragements of woman, most of them pass their lives almost from necessity, in a room perhaps twelve or fifteen feet square, always surrounded by the same objects, the same faces, the same cups and saucers. To embroider and work muslin, to whip children and change the servants, nay, to suckle fools and chronicle small evils, is not to be educated. And yet our young whippersnappers expect to lead at the understanding of women! Give women but half their opportunities, or their encouragements, and they would outstrip nineteen twentieths of the men about them.

John Neal.

The locofoco Argue is out with a prospectus, begging patronage. Not satisfied with the support it receives from the United States and State governments, it is calling upon the people, with a confidence it has so long abused, and whose best interests it has strenuously fought against, to come to its aid. And besides, so habituated has it become to uttering untruths, it cannot even issue a prospectus without playing its old tricks upon the people, so it tells this falsehood respecting the Whig press, in which we will venture to say there is not one word of truth. If truth let the Argue give its authority. An influential individual in every town has been designated, who is to obtain at least one subscriber.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

The Great Western brought 700 packages of British manufactured articles. Silks, Cottons, Linens, Woollens, Jewelry, hard ware, &c., valued at $70,000.

The news from France is but of little importance. There appears to be an uneasy quiet in Paris. The Insurrectionists had been put on their trial.

DANIEL WEBSTER. The London papers give proof of the fact that the Senator is not lost sight of in London. He has been the favored guest of many distinguished persons, among whom was Mr. Webster the Queen. One paper says "Mr. Webster has received every attention in London from the Literati, Nobility, and Gentry. His society has been courted by the most distinguished persons, and he is a frequent guest at the Queen's table."

The following were among the company at her Majesty's state ball: The American Minister and Mrs. Stevenson, Major and Mrs. Van Buren, Mr. Webster of the Senate of the United States, Mrs. and Miss Webster, and Mrs. Paige; Mr. Vanderpoel, of the House of Representatives of the United States, and Mrs. Vanderpoel; Major Chase, United States Engineer, and Mrs. Chase; Mr. Benjamin Rush, Secretary, and Mr. M. R. Singleton, attaché to the Legation of the United States.

We understand, says the London Morning Chronicle, that the Amer can merchants resident in London are about to give a splendid dinner to Mr. Webster, the eminent American statesman, now on a visit to this country.

THE CANADIAN PRISONERS. John G. Parker and seven other Canadian prisoners are to be released. Lord Russell sent to them demanding whether they would enter into security not to enter the Province of Upper Canada, or to approach near its borders, provided the government should release them. The prisoners returned an answer. They say, that having no desire to enter Upper Canada, they are willing to enter into the required bonds, and ask to be permitted to enter the Province at any future period, provided either of them can obtain the permission of the Colonial Government to do so.

Accounts from Coburg, state that the town of Neudorf has been destroyed by fire. The Town House and more than 400 houses were burned.

The harvests in Spain are most abundant, the crop being computed to be equal to four years' consumption and sufficient for eighteen months remaining on hand from last year's harvest.

FROM THE LADIES' COMPANION.

THE CHEAT.

OR THE OLD MAN OUTDO.

"Well Julia, I am a little bit of a miser, but I am a miser no more than you are at present. Suspense, Julia, is the cause of the most miserable feelings. We must not be too hasty Robert, our situation requires that caution by a little management we may succeed, gloomily as the prospect appears to be. Now don't say any thing to Pa about it. I had much rather you would not. The best way to accomplish wishes is not to advocate too soon."

Too soon, too soon Julia. Have we not waited two years, and have you not preached the same doctrine of 'too soon' all the while? Too soon, indeed!

"Well, now don't be angry, throw that frown from off your countenance and look pleasant, and we'll immediately set about some plan by which to effect what you so much wish come smile away your the skies of love are sometimes clear."

Robert Moultrie had loved Julia Halliwell and she loved him about 4 years and a half more or less two years and more had passed since they had agreed "come weal, come woe," they would drudge through life together. Two long, long years! no wonder Robert had lost his patience, the wonder is, why Julia had not lost hers. Two years would seem to be an eternity to wait upon the arms of bliss, and yet, during the happy consummation.

Julia's father was a wealthy shipper of the port of Charleston, South Carolina. Some old inhabitants may remember the firm of Halliwell & Hoddington. He was an upright and honorable man, but withal an old aristocrat, whose ipse dixit was law supreme whenever his power could be exercised.

Robert Moultrie was a clerk in his counting room, and his salary, which was his sole dependence, though far above the service of young men similarly situated, and amply sufficient in warranting him the expenses of a family, did not elevate him to that importance in society which would justify him in preening upon the heels and hand of the daughter of a wealthy shipper.

The character of the young gentleman was unimpeachable, and he was much respected for his talents as he was for his portly deportment, but (as is a wicked word) the curse of Gungankin was upon him. He was poor.

Robert had been in the counting room of Mr. H. since he was fourteen years of age. He had grown up to his family, and by the side of his lovely heiress, who had been promised to a thing of wealth and show, that thing of wealth and show was then in the Indies amassing wealth to lay at the feet of his beautiful bride and his soul had on it the stain of dishonor and Julia had vowed before God that he should never call her wife. Mr. H. knew that Robert usually attended his daughter to church, went and came with her when she visited her friends and so on, but he never dreamed that the wily cupid was wielding his dart successfully into the bosom of both and the arrows of the little god was firmly fixed, and he dealt out the wiken cord until they were far out upon the love too far to proceed or return without each other.

Do tell me, Robert, what is the matter with you? I have been a witness to your doleful looks and sorrowful appearance, until I have grown melancholy myself. What's the matter?

This question was asked by Mr. H. one day when he and Robert were in the counting room alone and if any individual has ever passed through a fiery trial, he can have some idea at Robert's feelings, when the man whose daughter he loved, and was contriving the best plan to get her from him addressed in such kind and affectionate language. It went too deep, however, into the secrets of Robert's bosom for him to return a quick reply. Mr. H. plainly saw that something was working on his mind that made him unhappy, and he wished it possible to remove the cause. He urged a candid revelation of all that affected his feelings and promising his assistance to relieve him to whatever amount it required. Robert succeeded however, in putting him off for that time, and trembled at the next meeting he related the matter to Julia.

"I thought said she laughing, you were not so anxious to ask the old gentleman as you appeared to be now that is a stumper Robert, why did you not?"

"Julia, do you think he suspects us?"

"Not a whit more than he does the king of the French."

"Well Julia, to tell the truth of the matter, I left you this morning with the intention of telling him our situation for each other, and if he refused, I was determined to act for myself without further advice; but when I met him I felt something in my throat choking me, and I could scarcely talk about business much less love affairs."

The lovers often met, and a voyage from the Indies being their only mode of escape, they agreed that they should prepare for the trials that seemed to await them. In the mean time Mr. H. was endeavoring to ascertain the cause of his clerk's unhappiness. Bore for the good of the young man, than he cared about the important mistakes made by him in his accounts. The next opportunity that afforded he repeated his former question and insisted on an immediate reply. Robert stammered and stammered a good deal, and at last he came out with it.

"I am attached to a young lady in this city sir, and I have reason to believe she is as much attached to me, but there is an obstacle in the way, and"

"Ah, indeed, and does the obstacle amount to more than a thousand dollars? If it does not, you shall not want. I'll fill up a check now, have all the parties consented? Why sir, the cause of my uneasiness, I am afraid her father will not consent."

"Will not consent, who is he? refer him to me, I'll reconcile the matter."

"He is a rich man sir, and I am not rich."

"I think—yes sir."

"She says that she does, any how, does she not?"

"Why, I—yes she—yes sir, she has said as much."

"Is the old fellow very rich?"

"I believe sir, that he is tolerably well off."

"And he won't consent? By the powers of love, he must be an old Turk like you then? Here, give me his name. I'll soon settle the matter. But stop, has he any thing against you? Is he acquainted with your character? Does he know me?"

Here the old man went over a string of questions which it is not worth while here to relate. The conclusion of the conference left Robert in the possession of a check for a thousand dollars, a letter of introduction to parson Green of the Presbyterian Church, and the following advice from the lips of the father-in-law in prospective. He was to run away with the girl, to use his (Mr. H.) carriage, and George, his black waiter, was to drive it. &c.

Robert governed himself in strict accordance with the advice given, and before dark the parties were at parson Green's, whose scruples of conscience were quieted by the introduction of the letter. They were soon pronounced man and wife, and jumped into the carriage, followed by a blessing from parson Green, whose fee was but a small part of the thousand dollar check. George was directed to drive the carriage to a rich old childless uncle of Robert's who lived about five miles from the city, to whom the secret was told. He thought the joke too good to be enjoyed alone, and he sent out for some of the neighbors. Midnight found the jovial assembly destroying the good things the aunt had provided, and laughing over the trick so successfully played upon one of the wealthiest shippers of the South.

Early next morning Robert and Mrs. Moultrie were attended by their uncle and aunt to the house of Mr. Halliwell the young couple anxious for the effervescence of a father's wrath to be over and the antiquated pair to act as moderators on the question. They were met by Mr. Halliwell, whose first words were:

"You young rogue you, I did not know, my advice was to act upon me. Well Robert, he added, laughing heartily, you caught me that time, and you deserve to be rewarded for the generalship you have displayed. Here my boy, my son I suppose I must say, here is a deed of property worth eleven thousand dollars, and henceforth you are my partner in business."

VINEUS WATER FOR THE GROWTH OF THE HAIR.
THOMAS D. ADAMS would respectfully inform his customers and those to whom he has furnished his celebrated Vineus Water, that he has a quantity more on hand and as one phial is not sufficient to produce the desired effect, they had better take a second. As he has nothing for the same, he presumes they will have no objection in complying with his request.
THOMAS D. ADAMS. Hair Dresser.
N. B. In order for the Water to have any effect, all kinds of oil, and every thing of a greasy nature must be avoided.

PRACTICAL BOOK-KEEPING

Practical Book-keeping, SYSTEMATIC—JUST PRACTICAL.

Practical Book-keeping, SYSTEMATIC, where,
in every principle taught is explained in a simple and plain manner; containing Numerous Questions—and containing the useful forms for all kinds of work with the modern improvement. Being a COMPLETE SYSTEM in one book. 16 which is added a Description of BOOK KEEPING, with numerous Examples for Practice. By GEORGE LEONARD, Jr.
THE WORK commences in a very simple manner, so as to be completely understood by the most moderate capacity, having no previous knowledge perceptible gradations, from the easy and obvious, to the more difficult parts; rendering the progress of the scholar agreeable and amusing, and leaving the teacher much trouble and vexation. The order in every rule is made evident, either by the questions which lead the scholar to discover the truth, or by a short, simple, and forcible explanation.

The articles are arranged in a more natural order than that usually employed, so that the operations in many subjects are performed by merely applying the preceding principles: without any loss of time, as soon as any principle is explained it is immediately applied in succeeding parts of the work thereby calling it living to the mind, and showing its practical application.

There is no superficial or mutilated account of any subject, all that is important concerning it is given, and this is done, not only with the utmost accuracy, but in a manner so plain and so simple, that every scholar can employ, but often so as to excite the simplicity of the work.

The object of book keeping will be found to be created in most useful and practical manner, for the student, not only the proper systems and explanations, but the scholar is required to examine the accounts and examine the business of the world, and

The copy-questions are placed at the bottom of each page. They resemble their appropriate answers in phraseology, whereby much time and trouble is saved the learner as well as the instructor. The simplicity of the work, the regular gradations by which it proceeds from the easy and obvious to those which are more difficult, combine with the numerous questions and the peculiar attention to their respective purposes, to furnish this Arithmetic superior for the mass of Self-Instruction, to be plain and practical, and therefore well fitted for the Farmer and Mechanic. No arithmetic contains more that is useful for the merchant, or better adapted to his purpose; nor is the mode of reviewing and general plan ill suited to the Scientific or Literary Student. The work is printed in neat Boston school book style, on good paper and is well bound.

We are very desirous that this Arithmetic should be examined by all interested in Education, believing it will be found to be a superior work for Schools, Academies, &c. and also for Self-Instruction.

SEARS' GENUINE VEGETABLE PULMONARY MALSAMIC SYRUP
— LIVERWORT —

FOR Cure of Consumptions, Coughs and Colds.
More than 75,000 Bottles of this very valuable Medicine has been sold (formerly in the State of Maine) since it was first offered to the public by the original inventor and proprietor J B
Sears, a few years since.

It is undoubtedly superior to any other article offered to the public; as it seldom fails in giving relief where it is taken in due season.

Although the superior virtues of this medicine are well known, and its quality is highly appreciated, many of the most respectable of the Medical Faculty the following certificates are added for the satisfaction of those who may be afflicted with the diseases for which it is designed, several others may be seen on the bill of directions accompanying each bottle.

I do hereby certify, that I have this day examined the composition of a Medicine prepared by John B.
 Sears of this town, which is called Vegetable Pulmonary Balsamic Syrup of Liverwort, the cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds &c. &c. and in my opinion it is superior to any Cough Syrup that has come within my knowledge.
